Founded in 1960, Desert Caballeros Western Museum has not only amassed significant collections of Western art and artifacts, but has also developed award-winning exhibitions and programs to showcase these works. Opening December 24 and on view through March 2 is Myrna Harrison; Western Visions 1960-2013.

"Though she lives in tiny Wickenburg, Myrna Harrison's art is truly national in scope. From her early training in New York and Provincetown with Hans Hofmann in the 1950s to California in the '60s and '70s to Arizona today, her work maintains its own distinctive style and exuberant joie de vivre," says Mary Ann Igna, Desert Caballeros Western Museum curator and deputy director. "Visitors will appreciate the opportunity to see many vivid landscapes on loan from private collectors and to experience the progression of Myrna's work over the 50 years she has painted in the West."

Darcie Peet

There are few limits to how far painter Darcie Peet will go to get art inspiration. Biking, skiing, hiking, kayaking and riding through the countryside are her preferred methods of discovering material.

The Illinois-born, Pennsylvania-raised painter is currently planning a horseback trip through Wyoming for her next body of work.

A Signature Member of the Oil Painters of America, Peet—whose background is in interior design, graphic design and advertising—has several upcoming shows including the Settlers West Galleries' Miniatures Exhibition in Tucson; the Western Art and Landscape Show at Greenhouse Gallery of Fine Art in San Antonio, Texas; the Cowgirl Up! show in Wickenburg; and other shows in Montana and Wyoming.
